

years transportation. The partners endeavored to escape the penalty of their fraud by making a confession before the Bankruptcy Commissioner, which the law provides for, but it is doubtful if the trick will succeed. In consequence of the shock to confidence given by this failure, the private banking houses have demanded it necessary to meet at the Clearing House, and do so by resolution that if any "one demanded from his bankers the examination of securities deposited with them for safe custody, the bankers of the city are unanimously of opinion that they should consider such examination as a most proper and business-like proceeding."

Messrs. Glyn, Roberts, Barnes, and several others of the leading London houses, will henceforth affix the following notice in the pass-books of all their customers:

"Messrs. — respectfully request their friends, from time to time, to do them the favor of examining the securities deposited with them for safe custody."

In relation to American stocks, the report of Mr. E. F. Satterwhite is as follows:

"Since our last market in London for American Stocks and Bonds, there has been a general disposition of the public to invest in them is evidently increasing, and with much reason, considering the interest they yield, and the sound character of many of the securities."
